

WRITING

TIPS

from

R.A. Spratt

Who is your story about?

①

What is their problem? (before the story even starts).

Where will your story take place?

②

How will this location make your story more interesting? (create more problems).

Now start writing.

JUST DO IT! Don't

stop, edit or go back and change anything.

Write until you get to the end and the whole story has been told.

Then go back and fix it up.

Good luck!

Think about your ending now, before you even start.

③

Picture the super dramatic climax in your mind.

Who are your characters?

Are they helpers

or hindrances?

What are their problems?

How does this create problems for your hero?

* Have one wise/magical

character who provides you help with the key to resolving the story

prob. (the wise person can seem to do it)

Now think about your beginning. What is the first step your character will take to get you to that ending?

④

Your story will have lots of steps. What is the first one?

Plan out your story's structure

Work out all the plot points and characters you need to get to your climax
